

I have been getting the benefits of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law for only a few months now. I feel that i have benefitted greatly from limiting the people that felt comfortable bothering me without my permission. I received sometimes 5 or so calls a day, usually in the evening, or during dinnertime, or even on Sundays, coming to at least 35 calls a week. I was amazed at the effectiveness of this ruling, and do not want anything to change this. I understand that small business and non-profit groups have the right to get business, but considering the number of such groups in our country, I might have to get a secretary to handle all the calls if they feel comfortable calling without my first showing my initial, or even continued interest in their causes. I do not object to receiving a letter, which I can throw away if I don't want it, but telephone calls interrupt my life, and I do object to that. Please either let the individual states rule individually, or agree to not let private interest groups get the better of you...you would be doing the citizens a disservice. Thank You.
